(4) On a careful examination of the Standing Orders relating to the C.R.S., there appears to be no authority for prescribing the special or preferential qualifications referred to in the remarks column of the notifications of vacancies. But the notifications of several previous years tend to show that it was generally the practice to insert the preferential qualifications, whenever the appointing officers proposed in the remarks ~~of~~ column. This has been in practice since June 1924 when the vacancies began to be advertised.

(5) Refer:- Member's query in Para 3 above.

The prescribing of special or preferential qualifications (such as previous office experience, higher class or 1st class in the Exam etc) are, strictly, not covered under the Standing orders & Rules, & seems, however, to have gone on as a matter of practice, all along.

As this practice is not authorised & is not, in strict conformity with the Standing orders prescribing the requisite qualifications for the post & has, in some cases, caused & is likely to cause some practical difficulties, I am ~~of~~ inclined to issue instructions to the Branch to discontinue it & adopt rigidly
